Gaza Chronicles: Stories Beyond Borders and Shadows

Within the quiet hum, where the weight of words meets human emotion, I find myself grappling with a narrative both poignant and deeply unsettling—the story of Gaza. Our space, typically a haven for creative expression, becomes a solemn arena as we attempt to navigate the labyrinth of Gaza's struggle.

As the orchestrator of words on these pages, I feel the ache of empathy tug at my conscience, compelling me to weave a tale that transcends mere news and touches the raw nerve of human suffering. Gaza, a tale of anguish and resilience, unfolds before us, beckoning us to bear witness to a story that defies the boundaries of geopolitics.

In the shadows, where ideas dance before becoming printed prose, we confront a narrative that eludes simplicity. The plight of Gazans, caught in the crossfire of political machinations, demands a nuanced portrayal that captures the essence of their resilience amid seemingly insurmountable odds.

As we delve into the narratives etched in the rubble and tears of Gaza, we encounter a disconcerting reality—the perceived helplessness of Muslim nations in the face of the suffering. Behind the stoic diplomatic veneer, there lies a palpable sense of frustration, a sheard yearning to allviate the burdens carried by Gaza's sons and daughters.

The overt support for the Israeli occupation by Western powers casts a disquieting shadow over our endeavor. The ink on our pages must navigate the delicate balance between truth and the political alliances that define the global stage. It becomes a testament to the challenge of unraveling a narrative woven with threads of power, oppression, and the resilience of a people.

In these corridors, our mission extends beyond reporting; it becomes a commitment to humanizing the conflict, to evoking the shared humanity that transcends borders and ideologies. Through the emotional prism of our storytelling, we hope to shatter the indifference that shields the world from the painful reality faced by Gaza.

Grapple with the responsibility of translating the emotional narrative of Gaza into a story that moves hearts, transcending the constraints of political discourse. Our words, like a symphony, aim to strike a chord that resonates with the collective conscience, urging us all to confront the complexities of Gaza with open hearts and a renewed commitment to justice.

Dear
Diary

Diary of a Gazan Child

The pen trembles in my hand as I attempt to put into words the indescribable pain that now defines our existence. Last night, our world imploded, and in the cruel aftermath, we lost not only our home but two irreplaceable pieces of our family. As consciousness returned to me in the sterile hospital room, the magnitude of our loss settled upon my heart like a crushing weight.

Ahmed, my little brother with a spirit as boundless as the sky, and Mom, the heartbeat of our home, are no longer with us. The doctor's words, delivered with a compassion that seemed to echo the depth of our grief, confirmed what my heart already knew. In that moment, the fragments of our once whole family shattered into irreparable pieces.

Dad, whose strength now wavers in the face of unimaginable sorrow, sits with vacant eyes that mirror the hollowness within. The absence of Mom, the architect of our joy, and Ahmed, the embodiment of innocence, creates a void that no amount of time can fill. Our family, once a tapestry woven with love and laughter, now hangs in tatters.

Noor, my precious sister, clings to me as if I can shield her from the harsh reality that surrounds us. Her eyes, once filled with the sparkle of childhood wonder, now reflect a sorrow that belies her tender years. We console each other in the silence that stretches between heartbeats, mourning the lives that were stolen from us in the darkness of the night.

The hospital room, stripped of the vibrant hues of Ahmed's laughter and Mom's nurturing embrace, feels colorless and desolate. The toys that once echoed with the joy of play now stand as silent witnesses to a tragedy that defies understanding. Each corner of the room holds memories of our family's unity, now forever lost to the cruelty of war.

Diary, the ink spills onto your pages, a feeble attempt to encapsulate the enormity of our grief. The road ahead stretches into an abyss of uncertainty, and the weight of loss threatens to drown us. But within this desolation, I gather the strength to be a pillar of support for Noor and Dad, knowing that the love we shared as a family will endure, even in the face of devastating loss.

With a heart shattered beyond repair

GAZZA

Written by: Wisam Idrees

The war had broken out in the land of Jerusalem which is a holy destination for the Muslims and Jews. Many were displaced and forced to flee the North of the Gaza strip, the region of the highest tension. The chaos around enveloped the loneliness of many orphans who had no one to express their sorrow to.

Ali, a young, innocent Palestinian kid was amid that chaos and his little heart was in search for love and warmth of 'Home & Family'. This naïve kid didn't know his fate and how to take his decisions. He didn't find the need to migrate with the masses to the south but stayed back at his home in search of a better life which was now void of any meaning. The only heritage that his parents left were the sweet memories that they lived together, in the house that was now reduced to rubble. The house was his only place to stay.

His stay prolonged for three days in an abandoned vicinity with no only place to stay.

His stay prolonged for three days in an abandoned vicinity with no food and no definite aim for his future. His on the verge of giving away his innocent soul to the appointed angels. BUT.... The relief team reach out to his apartment to provide him with the humanitarian assistance needed. Their jackets featured by the soothing blend of Blue, Orange, Green with a large logo of Baitussalam. 'WE ARE HERE TO HELP YOU' echoed one of the voice .

So if you are concerned about paying your share in this noble effort and help someone attain the joy of Family, Warmth and Freedom then forward your monetary fund to the international organization

New Year

The commencement of New Year brings opportunities for us to improve our life-style and be more self-worth. Every new year is a good starter for a positive change in ourselves, and we all do make attempts to bring change in our lives over a certain period of time, be it week or a month, a term or an academic year. But this time let's be more committed. Since the Gregorian Calendar has signaled the arrival of the year 2024, let's kick off with a massive package of aims and goals to achieve this year.

Firstly, let us make promise to ourselves to offer all the prayers of this year with Takbeer-e-U'laa. Let us make sure we stop all activities on the first call of Az'aan. The only time when you need to be more careful is during holidays at our homes. If you are on the go with your goals in those days, congratulations! you have achieved it. You can also begin your year, making up your mind to wear turban as Sunnah of Holy prophet, for the rest of your lives. Right now submit your names with the president of Amr bil Ma'arroof Society for TFL(Turban For Life).

Secondly, specify a number of best books or series for yourselves to read that you couldn't finish last year. You can choose any category and aim to finish it or cover a particular topic by the end of this year.

Let's be more productive! Let's be more hardworking! This year let's get the best grades in all the exams this year. Let's make sure we achieve the 80th percentile.

And of course, join any society or field to find your hidden potential. Think of what you want to be like at the end of this year. The same? Obviously not. Develop your technical skills by joining the learning lab or giving a try to robotics, you might take the dais, the choice is yours. But remember do not spend it like previous one. Would not you want to see a different and better version of yourself at the end of this year?

THE INVENTIONS THAT CHANGED THE COURSE OF HISTORY

1. The invention of the wheel was a big deal

The wheel, a groundbreaking invention, emerged around 3500 B.C. in Mesopotamia. Surprisingly, its development lagged behind other advancements like metal alloys, canals, and instruments like harps.

The delay in the wheel's invention wasn't due to its concept, likely originating from observing rolling objects, but in pairing it with a fixed axle. This coupling is crucial, as without it, the wheel's utility is minimal.

2. The compass ranks up there with the most important inventions

The compass, initially used for fortune-telling and "geomancy," eventually evolved for navigation. The Chinese likely created the earliest compasses resembling today's around 200 BC, made of lodestone.

Earlier versions used lodestone for similar purposes around the 6th century BCE. Around 1050 AD, people began suspending lodestones for freer movement, aiding navigation.

By 1190 AD, European texts described magnetized needles for navigation, suggesting their common usage by then

3. The modern world wouldn't exist

without the automobile

The modern car is often attributed to Karl Benz, patenting the Benz Patent-Motorwagen in 1886. However, the development of automobiles traces back to Nicolas-Joseph Cugnot in 1769, who created the first steam-powered vehicle for human transportation.

The automobile's evolution involved contributions from numerous individuals. Henry Ford's innovations in the early 20th century made cars affordable for the masses, setting a standard adopted by General Motors and Chrysler. This global evolution involved collaborative efforts to create not only the internal combustion engine but also various car components. Multiple industries, such as oil and steel, were pivotal in this journey.

4. The steam engine was a true revolution in technology

Jerónimo de Ayanz is credited with patenting a steam-powered device for pumping water from mines. Thomas Savery developed the first practical steam engine in 1698, drawing on Denis Papin's principles. Thomas Newcomen improved the engine in 1711, and James Watt added a separate condenser in 1781, significantly enhancing its efficiency. Watt later developed a double-rotating steam engine that became pivotal in powering trains, mills, factories, and various manufacturing operations by the 1800s.

5. The computer is, possibly, the greatest invention of the last Millenium

In the early 19th century, the “father of the computer,” Charles Babbage, conceptualized and invented the first mechanical computer. From those first tentative steps, the journey to the modern computer began.

Although there’s no single inventor of the modern computer, the principles of modern computer science were set out by Alan Turing in his seminal 1936 paper, “On Computable Numbers, with an Application to the Entscheidungsproblem.” Today, computers stand as the symbolic representation of the modern world.

HADITH

WINTER IS THE BEST SEASON FOR THE BELIEVER

The Noble Messenger of Allah (Sallallaahu Alayhi Wasallam) is reported to have said:

“Winter is the best season for the believer. Its nights are long for him to pray in, and its days are short for him to fast in.”

A Day in Teacher's Shoes: A Lesson in Perspective

HALIMA SADIA

When I was asked to step into the role of a teacher for a day, I thought it would be easy. However, I soon discovered that teaching is a far more complex and demanding profession than I ever imagined.

One of the most critical challenges I faced was dealing with a disruptive student. I realized that teaching is more than just following the lesson plan; it requires patience, conflict resolution skills, and a deep understanding of how to manage classroom dynamics. I addressed this issue by having a private conversation with the student to uncover her concerns and find constructive ways to involve learners in the lesson.

My brief stint as a teacher profoundly changed my perspective on the profession. I came to realize the immense responsibility that teachers carry in shaping not only students' education but also their character. Every decision a teacher makes plays a vital role in fostering a positive and effective learning environment.

Throughout my teaching experience, I discovered that interactive methods, such as group discussions and hands-on activities, proved to be the most effective means of conveying information and engaging students. These methods allowed students to actively participate in the learning process, making it not only more enjoyable but also more memorable.

My day as a teacher deepened my appreciation for the qualities that teachers must possess. Patience is a necessity when addressing the diverse needs of students, while empathy helps in understanding their struggles and challenges. Furthermore, being well-organized is crucial for effectively managing lesson plans, resources, and the dynamics within the classroom. Teaching is, without a doubt, a demanding profession that requires a multifaceted skill set.

I am grateful for the opportunity to have experienced teaching firsthand. It has given me a deeper understanding of the challenges and rewards of the profession, and it has solidified my admiration for teachers.

EAGLE FLIGHT

The ethereal glow of the dawn, the eagle broke free from its nest atop the craggy cliffs, its wings slicing through the morning air like a silent omen. But this wasn't just any dawn—it was a dawn painted with secrets, where the sun's rays whispered tales of untold mysteries that danced along the horizon.

As the majestic bird soared, its keen eyes pierced the veils of dawn, scanning the waking world below. But there was a peculiar urgency in its flight, a sense of purpose that hinted at a quest unknown to any onlooker. What did the eagle seek in this hushed spectacle of daybreak?

Casting a shadow upon the landscape, the eagle navigated the shifting winds with an almost palpable anticipation. Far below, the world stirred from its slumber. The mountains stood guard, guarding ancient secrets carved into their very stone. The forests murmured secrets to the breeze, hinting at stories untold.

Yet, it was the valley that held the eagle's curious attention. A tapestry of greenery sprawled before it, veiled in the morning's mist. Here, life awoke in a symphony of rustling leaves and the whispered conversations of creatures beginning their day.

With an abrupt twist, the eagle diverted its flight path toward a secluded vantage point; a rocky outcrop shrouded in mystery. What was hidden within this seemingly ordinary overlook that drew the eagle's interest so fervently?

Perched upon the precipice, the eagle observed the unfolding drama below, a tale of survival and stealth. And then, amidst the tranquil meadow, a lone figure emerged—a creature daring to step beyond the safety of its burrow.

In a heartbeat, the eagle lunged from its perch, a blur of determination and mystery. Was this the moment of revelation, the answer to the silent question echoing through the dawn-draped valley?

The unsuspecting creature froze, sensing the impending danger too late. With a breathtaking display of power and grace, the eagle snatched its prize—a sudden and thrilling twist in the unfolding tale.

And as the bird disappeared into the infinite sky, its hunt successful, a cloak of intrigue lingered. What compelled the eagle's pursuit? What hidden forces shaped its purpose? The valley remained silent, guarding its secrets amidst the creisp light of a new day, leaving the mysteries of the dawn's eagle hunt suspended in the air, waiting to unfold.....

Outside the window, there is a colorful suburban neighborhood with houses in shades of red, orange, and blue. The sky is a mix of blue and purple, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The title 'DEPRESSION ON THE WAY' is written in large, white, bold letters across the middle of the window view.

DEPRESSION ON THE WAY

By Muhammad Saheem

The brakes screeched and the engine smoke came blowing into my eyes

That was the time when I had left my city forever. Not just the city, but my parents, my friends, my relatives and my family. I had no other option other than letting my fate decide my destiny.

It wasn't very easy as it looked like, leaving everything in a sudden, packing your bags as if you are grounded for the entire life, but most importantly entering a new school where none is known to you. Those heartbreaking moments gave my eyes a tearful period of time when I was seeing my mother for the last time. The figure hanging with my mother wasn't much experienced, but I knew that I had to be brave throughout my life, so I buried my head in the sand and stepped on the aisle of the bus to get to my seat. With great difficulty I located my seat and settled down with the watery - eyes, continuously thinking and remembering my happy life with my family. To stop my sobbing I would remember the special saying of my mother, which was to make me realize that to achieve something, you need to lose your freedom so people do not call you weak.

Depression is just an illusion.

I comfortably settled down on my seat which was next to a window that helped me peep out at the wonderful Mother-land of the city's overseas, but I was still lost in my fantasy of the deviation from my city and family

I could hear babies weeping, passengers listening to music and a group of old citizens chatting with one another. This environment had made me bring a smile on my face and neglect the tears of loneliness I had. My drainy eyes made me feel sleepy in just a short duration of time and, without any sort of tension shut my eyes and zoned out.

After a couple of hours of sleep, I woke up by an instant shake of the bus and opened my eyes to glance at the situation. The passengers and stood up- from their respective places and started moving out as the bus reached at the destination. With great deal of difficulty I managed myself out of the humid condition of the bus by squeezing my body out of the long crowded queue. I finally reached the end of the aisle and excitedly forced my left foot towards the cemented road of the city and sensed the different aromas of edibles of the surroundings. There were small, old shops and juice stalls on the side of the road. I could feel the delicious aroma of Biryani from one of the shops which got my appetite plus my mouth full of water. After spectating and witnessing the ambience of the city, I decided to fetch my luggage from the side trunk of the bus. While I awaited my luggage in the queue, I saw an old woman receiving her luggage. The woman's appearance seemed similar to a lady who looked quite familiar to me. The old woman seemed as a lady who I had known for adoring me since my childhood. Her appearance got me curious and out of words to speak.

She grabbed her luggage and began exiting the queue, while her face got revealed to me and with great astonishment my tears started draining out of my eyes and I couldn't believe that woman was actually. . .

DUA'

IS THE CORE OF THE WORSHIP

By Umer Zeb

Summary of Hazrat Abdussattar (D.B)'s discourse to the students at Baitus-salam Talagang

One's actions have a very extensive repercussions in their life. Though the materialistic world doesn't accept this religious axiom, this is the law of Allah (S.W.T), which the Prophet (S.A.W) taught us. If we begin to have iman (faith) in this, we would surely be ordained with "ruju-il-Allah" (turning to Allah). And the best way to turn to Allah (S.W.T) is Dua'.

Prophet (S.A.W) didn't spare a single opportunity where he could make Dua; let those circumstances be social, financial or even personal. When he woke up, he made prayer, when he travelled, he sought Allah's mercy, when he ate, he asked for barakah in the meal. This is the attitude which later compelled the muhaditheen to entitle him as "Bab-ud-Dua".

Living souls who don't believe so, their hands cannot raise before Allah (SWT), let alone improving relations with Him. They beg every individual but don't get to bow down and ask from the King of kings, Owner of the Earth and Heavens; the-all-doer.

Prophet (S.A.W) schooled his Ummah that no wazifa is to be preferred over Dua' by this tradition:-

"Dua is the core of worship"

Allah says that He answers the call (dua) of His servants.

Umar (R.A) stated, "I don't care if my supplication is answered or not, what matters to me is taufeeq to supplicate". Seeing that the more you put forward your needs and wishes before Allah (S.W.T) the more He loves you. The case is contrary when it comes to the mortal humans.

Quoting his conversation with Sheikh UI Islam, Hazrat said: If someone finds it hard to recite the daily chapter of musnoon duas in Munajat e Maqbool, they may recite all the seven chapters in one day; this shall have a good impact for the upcoming week, Insha'Allah. Other than Munajat e Maqbool, Hizbul Azam is a preferable option too, which is comparatively

Global Warming: Our Urgent Wake-Up Call

Our planet, Earth, is like a beautiful painting, full of life and beauty. But hidden within this beauty is a serious problem: global warming. It's caused by human actions and is now a big problem that needs our immediate attention. This crisis is changing the way our world works, affecting nature, weather, and life itself. What was once far away is now happening right before our eyes.

The effects of global warming are really sad. Imagine polar bears struggling because their homes, the ice caps, are melting away. Think about huge fires burning forests and leaving them in ruins. Picture communities torn apart by powerful storms, leaving people to rebuild their lives over and over.

Global warming isn't just a scientific problem. It's an emotional one too. It makes us sad to see animals losing their homes and people losing everything they have. It also makes us realize that we need to take care of our planet for the sake of our future.

But even though things seem tough, there's hope. Each one of us can make a difference. We can change how we live to help our planet. Using more renewable energy, reducing how much we harm the environment, and learning more about how to take care of nature are all steps we can take.

Teaching young people about the environment is also really important. When they learn how to take care of the Earth, they can help make sure it stays healthy for the next generation.

It's not just up to individuals, though. Governments and big companies need to step up too. They can make rules and invest in clean technology to help fight climate change. When countries work together, big changes can happen.

We're at a very important moment in history. The choices we make today will affect the future. If we don't do anything, things will get worse. But if we work together, we can make things better.

Let's listen to this wake-up call and take care of our planet. Let's work together to protect it for the future. Our actions today can make a big difference. We can create a better world where nature thrives and future generations can enjoy it too.

ECHOES OF HONESTY & HARDWORK

by Huzaifa Rehman

In this world filled with constant hustle and bustle, the timeless wisdom encapsulated in quotes serves as a guiding light. This month, let's dive deep into the profound themes of quotes. As we get onto this exploration, we came across the hidden powers and infinite meaningfulness of these concise expressions hold in shaping our values and fueling our endeavors.

To begin, let us look upon the words

“Honesty is the best policy”

This implies to your prescribed policies of daily affairs, dealings, suggestions authoritative position, rules and regulations which shall be met with honesty.

“Honesty is the first chapter in book of wisdom.”

Adopting to honest policies in every possible field of life or any scenario is inclined to remove negativity from your character, which is a gateway towards wisdom.

The thing that has to go hands and gloves with honesty is hardwork.

“Success is no accident. It is hard-work, perseverance, learning, studying, sacrifice and most of all, love of what you are doing or learning to do.”

Thomas Edison failed 999 times while making a light bulb but he said: “It was never a failure and I discovered 999 ways of how to not make a bulb.” His perseverance and persistence led to his success. Follow the instructions of honesty and never leave an impediment create resistance in your pace to success.

“The only way to achieve the impossible is to believe it is possible. If you look at impossible it says: I AM POSSIBLE.”

IN THE MIDST OF DARKNESS, FAITH STANDS TALL

By Haseem

In the midst of darkness, a glimmer of light,
A prayer for peace, to end the endless night.
For in the heart of struggle, a strength unseen,
A brighter future, where love intervenes.

In the quiet prayers, in the silent tears,
Hope emerges to calm the deepest fears.
For every hardship faced, a lesson learned,
A path to healing, where bridges are earned.

With faith as their guide, and courage in hand,
Gaza's people rise, a resilient band.
In Allah's mercy, they find their might,
A beacon of hope, a guiding light.

Through the rubble and the shattered dreams,
A vision persists, of unity it seems.
May Allah's grace shine upon their way,
Leading them to a brighter, peaceful day.

Enemies may loom, but faith stands tall,
A fortress of strength, where hope won't fall.
With Allah by their side, they'll overcome,
The struggles they face, the battles not won.
In the tapestry of time, a story unfolds,
Of a people so strong, whose spirit never folds.
May the winds of change carry a message divine,
A future where love and peace intertwine

The Bitter Truths

By Muhammad Bin Sanaullah

There is nothing in this world for those,
Just by outlook they are rose
Struggling through the thrones but sharing aroma still However all good deeds they do are

I suppose this trait will eat them away
In the world hereafter they 'll need to pay Miserable and stark impacts will also be seen when by and by they start to get mean

Everyone seems interested in spilling the beans
Good deeds do not exist in genes
Everyone is wolf in the skin of a sheep
It's an inevitable fate which makes me weep

We all have got such horrible mind
Which makes cruel but not kind
Our dreadful acts cause this dreadful reality
As nothing in us is of islamic quality

Backbiting is also widely known in here
If it is done about us we cannot bear
Then we do we treat others like others'
Don't we believe we all are brothers

How to make

Kashmiri Tea

Kashmiri tea is a common and preferable beverage drunk in Pakistan. Despite being indigenous to Kashmiris, virtually every Pakistani gives it an edge over the typical tea. The cause of its popularity is the refreshing taste as well as the distinctive and pleasant fragrance it is equipped with.

Now, being a native of Kashmiri, I would like to expose its original prescription because the recipe of “Kashmir Tea” consumed in Pakistan clashes with the real formula used by Kashmiris

Ingredients (for 1 ½ cups):

- 5 tea leaves
- Water
- Organic milk
- Almonds and Pistachios (moderately crushed)
- A pinch of salt

Let's start:

1. Pour ½ cup water into the pot and boil it till it evaporates completely.
2. Overturn another cup of water and boil it until 1/3 of it is leftover. Now soak leaves in it.
3. Stir the liquid for 5 minutes and filter out the leaves.
4. Sprinkle the crushed cluster of nuts onto the pinkish-milky refreshment.
